A reminder about the course collaboration policy: Your work on problem sets and exams should be your own. You may discuss approaches to problems with other students, but as a general guideline, such discussions may not involve taking notes. You must write up solutions on your own independently, and acknowledge anyone with whom you discussed the problem by writing their names on your problem set. You may not use papers or books or other sources (e.g., material from the web) to help obtain your solution.
